The Age of Innocence is a 1920 novel by American author Edith Wharton. It is the story of Newland Archer, an upper-class New York City lawyer who is about to marry May Welland, the daughter of his patron. However, Newland becomes interested in Ellen Olenska, a cousin of May's who is living separately from her husband, Count Olenski. The novel explores themes of love, marriage, and societal expectations, and it is noted for its attention to detail and its accurate portrayal of Victorian-era American life.

Edith Wharton was a prominent American writer of the early 20th century. She was the first woman to be awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction in 1921, for her novel The Age of Innocence. Her work often explored themes of social class, morality, and the complexities of romantic relationships. Wharton was also a prominent figure in the American literary scene, and she was a founding member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters.

Edith Wharton was born in 1862 in New York City, the daughter of a wealthy and prominent family. She grew up in a household filled with books and intellectual discussions, and she developed a love for literature from a young age. Wharton attended Vassar College, where she was one of the first women to earn a college degree.

Over the course of her career, Wharton wrote more than thirty novels, short stories, and non-fiction works. Her work was well-received by critics, and she was recognized for her contributions to American literature. In 1920, she was awarded the Pulitzer Prize for Fiction for The Age of Innocence, and in 1927, she was awarded the Nobel Prize in Literature. Wharton's writing is noted for its refined language and its exploration of complex social and moral questions.

The Age of Innocence was published in 1920, and it is considered one of Wharton's most significant works. The novel is set in the 1870s, in upper-class, “Gilded-Age” New York City. It tells the story of Newland Archer, an upper-class New York City lawyer who is about to marry May Welland, the daughter of his patron. However, Newland becomes interested in Ellen Olenska, a cousin of May's who is living separately from her husband, Count Olenski.
